

You are part of a team of astronauts on a mission to explore a distant planet. As you approach the planet, your ship suddenly loses power and crashes. You wake up to find that you are the only survivor and your communication device is damaged beyond repair. You must find a way to survive and reach the nearest human settlement. Option 1: Search for food and water. Option 2: Repair the ship and try to contact other ships. Option 3: Explore the surroundings for any signs of life.

You decide to explore the surroundings for any signs of life, in hopes of finding help or resources. You set out into the barren, rocky plains around you, searching for any signs of movement or activity. As you trek along, you suddenly spot a small cluster of structures in the distance. You make your way towards them and discover what appears to be a settlement built by an alien species. Option 1: Approach the settlement and attempt to communicate with the aliens. Option 2: Observe the settlement from a distance and try to gather information. Option 3: Ignore the settlement and continue on your own.