As a crew member of the Interstellar Explorer, you embark on a mission to explore a distant planet. However, upon arrival, you notice that the planet is in a state of total war. You have no way to leave until your rescue team comes in six months. What do you do?

- Option 1: Make contact with one of the warring factions and try to negotiate for a safe space.
- Option 2: Stay hidden and observe from afar to collect intel to report back to mission control.
- Option 3: Use your ship's advanced technology to disguise as a native of the planet and try to mingle with the locals.
- Option 4: Attempt to find a way to signal for help from the rescue team despite the chaos on the planet.

You decide to stay hidden and observe from afar. From your vantage point, you notice that one of the warring factions, the Trakorians, has advanced technology that could potentially help your mission. However, getting close to them could be dangerous as they have deployed several drones that seem to be monitoring the surrounding areas. What do you do?

Option 1: Risk getting caught and try to steal some of their technology.

Option 2: Use your ship's technology to hack into the drones and disable them.

Option 3: Reach out to the other faction and see if they could provide any assistance in negotiating with the Trakorians.

Option 4: Wait for an opportunity to present itself and observe their movements to see if there is a chance to get closer unnoticed.

You decide to wait and observe the Trakorians' movements. After a few days, you notice that the drones that were stationed around their base have decreased in numbers, making it easier for you to move closer. As you get nearer, you overhear a conversation between two Trakorian soldiers discussing a crucial meeting that will take place in a few hours. What do you do?

Option 1: Try to eavesdrop on the meeting to gather intel.

Option 2: Use your ship's technology to create a diversion and sneak into their base to steal some technology.

Option 3: Use your communication device to contact the other faction and see if they could provide any assistance in exchanging intel.

Option 4: Wait and observe from a safe distance to see what happens after the meeting.
