

You wake up in a cryogenic pod on board a spaceship hurtling through space. You have no memory of how you got there, but you do know that there are only a limited number of days until you reach your destination. You realize that the ship is failing and you must venture out into space to repair it before it's too late. Suddenly, you hear a voice whispering in your ear. It's coming from a small device attached to your wrist. The voice tells you that there are aliens on board the ship and that they are the reason why the ship is failing. The voice offers you a choice: Option 1: Try to find and befriend the aliens to see if you can work together to repair the ship. Option 2: Arm yourself and prepare for battle, assuming the aliens are hostile. What do you choose?

You decide to try and find the aliens to see if you can work together. You follow the voice's instructions and end up in a small chamber. There, you see three aliens staring at you. They don't seem hostile, but you can tell that they are very cautious of you. The voice speaks again, telling you to approach them with caution and to offer a gesture of peace. Option 1: Offer them some food from your rations. Option 2: Show them the small potted plant you brought with you as a symbol of peace. Option 3: Take off your helmet as a gesture of trust.