You are a scientist on a spaceship that is on a mission to explore a newly discovered planet. The planet is known to have a dense atmosphere, but initial scans indicate the possibility of rare and valuable minerals. As the ship begins its descent through the planet's atmosphere, something goes wrong and the ship starts to lose altitude rapidly. The captain initiates emergency protocols and orders everyone to evacuate. You grab your survival pack and head to the nearest escape pod. Option 1: Stay in the escape pod and wait for rescue. Option 2: Explore the planet for resources. Option 3: Try to fix the ship and send an S.O.S signal.

You crash land on the planet and barely make it out of the escape pod before it explodes. You look around and see nothing but dense jungle in every direction. You check your surroundings and find that your survival pack and equipment are still intact. As you begin to explore the jungle, you notice strange creatures lurking in the shadows. You also notice that your communicator is not working. Option 1: Try to find a way to repair your communicator. Option 2: Take a closer look at the strange creatures in the jungle. Option 3: Search for shelter and water.

You slowly approach one of the strange creatures and observe it from a distance. It has multiple limbs and razor-sharp teeth, but doesn't seem to notice you. You take out your scanner and it reveals that the creature is highly intelligent and has the ability to camouflage itself from its prey. You decide to retreat and continue exploring the jungle. Option 1: Use your scanner to locate other intelligent creatures in the area. Option 2: Try to capture one of the creatures for further analysis. Option 3: Look for additional resources that may give clues as to how to get off the planet.

You approach a different creature and manage to capture it without drawing attention to yourself. As you examine it, you discover that the creature has toxic venom that can be used as a powerful weapon. You take a sample of it and continue exploring the jungle. Option 1: Attempt to domesticate the creature. Option 2: Use the venom to make a weapon. Option 3: Continue searching for resources that may give clues on how to get off the planet.

You use the venom to make a weapon by extracting it and testing it on a nearby plant - the plant withers and dies almost instantly. You fashion a dart gun using the equipment from your survival pack and the venom. You feel much better prepared and continue your exploration of the jungle. Option 1: Use the dart gun to hunt for food. Option 2: Explore deeper into the jungle. Option 3: Search for a suitable place to build a shelter.

As you venture deeper into the jungle, you come across a clearing that appears to have been made by intelligent creatures. There are large structures, carvings on the trees, and abandoned tools. You use your scanner and it reveals that there is a working communication device within the structures. Option 1: Make contact with the intelligent creatures. Option 2: Investigate the area for important resources. Option 3: Avoid contact and continue on with exploration.

You make contact with the intelligent creatures, and they are initially wary of you. However, you use the translator in your survival pack to communicate with them, and they soon become more curious than afraid. They allow you into their village and offer you food and shelter. They explain that they have their own spaceship and have been stranded on the planet for years, unable to repair their ship. They offer to help you fix your communicator and your spaceship in exchange for your help in repairing their own. Option 1: Agree to help them repair their ship. Option 2: Refuse their offer and attempt to repair your own ship alone. Option 3: Take advantage of the situation and attempt to steal their technology.

You attempt to steal their technology while they are sleeping, but are caught in the act. The creatures are furious and you are forced to flee the village with nothing but the clothes on your back. You soon realize that you are hopelessly lost in the jungle and have no means of communication, and your survival pack is gone. Option 1: Attempt to find the village again and apologize. Option 2: Start searching for food and water. Option 3: Look for any part of the crashed ships to repair a way off the planet.

You manage to find the village again and apologize to the creatures for your actions. They are hesitant to forgive you, but you plead with them and promise to make it up to them. They eventually agree to help you repair your ship and complete your mission, but warn you that any further aggression will not be tolerated. They provide you with the resources and technical knowledge to repair your ship, and bid you farewell as you prepare to leave the planet. Option 1: Express gratitude and depart from the planet. Option 2: Steal something valuable from the village before leaving. Option 3: Sabotage the village's ship as revenge.

You decide to steal something valuable from the village before leaving. As you are trying to take something, you are caught in the act, the creatures are furious, and you are forced to flee the village with nothing. You get lost in the jungle and eventually succumb to hunger and thirst, unable to find resources on the hostile planet. Your mission ends in failure and tragedy. Sorry, this was not a good decision. Let's start over. Option 1: Express gratitude and depart from the planet. Option 2: Offer to help the creatures in their own mission. Option 3: Attempt to contact the exploratory team that you were part of, and ask for assistance.
